I am using a Mac, MAMP (MAMP stands for Mac OS X Apache MySQL PHP, by the way). I am using MySQL Workbench 6.2.8 CE, and this error comes up when I go to run my app. "Table userinfo has been marked as crashed and should be repaired." The database is quite small and the data is not really important, but still, I am worried about this error. Is there something I can do to fix this? A: Click Repair Table in the toolbar of the table window A: Once it's been repaired, you can try to upgrade to the latest version of MySQL Workbench. A: I had the same problem. The only way I was able to fix it was to drop the table and recreate it. If you are experiencing a problem in other tables, run a repair on that and then attempt to recreate the table again. I used the following command: drop table table_name; You may need to recreate the table first if you are using a view. Q: Client-Server application - Shared calendar I'm writing a small calendar application for Windows, which requires the use of a server. At the moment, my application is using a simple flatfile data source, storing calendar information in text files which are kept in the same folder as the executable. I've been thinking about using a database, however, as with SQL Server, I would need to share a database instance between the different users. If I use a single-user connection, I'll be able to manipulate the database from my application and save my changes back to the database. I assume this is a perfectly acceptable approach. The problem I have is that 2d92ce491b
